

What is arts in health?

Arts in health is a field dedicated to using the power of the arts to enhance health and well-being in diverse institutional and community contexts.

NOAH Essentials of Arts in Health Certificate

Learn more about NOAH's professional development opportunity for anyone interested in learning more about foundational concepts, research, strategies, and professional practice in harnessing the power of the arts to support health and well-being outcomes: thenoah.net/essentials-of-arts-in-health

The NOAH Essentials of Arts in Health Certificate of Completion designates an individual as having demonstrated understanding of a comprehensive body of foundational knowledge. This certificate verifies successful completion of a rigorous, three-hour, online test on the entire contents of the Core Curriculum for Arts in Health Professionals book publication.

About NOAH

The National Organization for Arts in Health (NOAH) is America's professional membership association dedicated to uniting and advancing the field of arts in health as an integral component to health and well-being.

NOAH is committed to better articulating and sharing the practices and research which foster diversity, equity, accessibility, and inclusion within all aspects of arts in health.

NOAH's members include artists, creative and expressive arts therapists, architects and designers, representatives of creative and cultural agencies, educators, administrators, doctors, nurses, and others working in medical care, medical education, and public health. NOAH is shaping a reality where the arts are fully incorporated into medical treatment, medical education, and public health and well-being.

Learn more about NOAH and the field of arts in health.